A Rich History

The roots of Florilegium Sheffield can be traced back to the early 19th century when the Sheffield Botanical Society was founded. In 1836, the society acquired a plot of land on what was then the outskirts of the city, with the aim of establishing a botanical garden.

Over the years, the garden grew and evolved, and in 1967 it was renamed Florilegium Sheffield. The name "florilegium" is derived from the Latin word "florilegus," meaning "flower gatherer." It aptly reflects the garden's focus on collecting and displaying a wide variety of plants.
